Clewiston Man Dies By His Own Hand

Christian Johnson, a mechanic at Clewiston early Monday morning tried to kill his wife and two daughters with a hammer and razor blade. He then used the razor blade to cut his own throat from which wounds he died.

Johnson had used a cloth bound hammer on his wife's head, inflicting a serious, but not fatal skull wound, and also cut her arm with the razor blade.

Mary, a 16-year-old daughter and Claudia, aged 12, were in their mother's bedroom when the attack was made by the husband and father, and Mary knelt to the hammer over his hand, and thus prevented other injuries to the women.

Johnson, an eight-year-old son, daughter, ran to the scene but was ordered back to his bed by the father, before he killed himself.

Johnson had resided in Clewiston for the past five years, but had been working out his health and money and had not been in the past two days; it was said in Clewiston.

Canning Is Done At Camp Osceola

The government health official and nurses now on duty at the migratory camps at Belle Glade are giving vaccinations for typhoid fever to all residents of the camp as a health precaution step. Many of the residents are now receiving new medical services, but which they seem to be most appreciative.

A home made canning plant has been set up in the recreation hall at Camp Osceola where tomatoes are being canned, with an expected output of around 2,000 cans. A number of barrels of saltcrank have also been manufactured. If the trial packing is a success, it is likely that the government will start a regular packing plant for next year using surplus crops.

The contractors for the landscaping of the camp is expected to start work on this improvement at an early date.
